WWW.CHRIS CRAFT STINGERS.COM Newsletter, December 2011

Welcome to the December, 2011 newsletter!

Welcome to another edition of the chris craft stingers.com newsletter. December is here – although cold up here in the northern hemisphere, work continues on the website.

The Stinger database now has roughly 437 Stingers in it from around the world. The exciting news is that I've found a 3rd 1989 334 Stinger! And, it's the only 334 Stinger that I'm aware of that is not a Fittipaldi version. At one point, the 334s were the least represented models in the registry. But with the documentation of the new 334, there are now 3 in the registry – equal to the number of 385s in the registry. The 334s and 385s are the rarest of the Stingers Chris-Craft built, and I'm always searching for ones that aren't on the registry.

As always, if you have any information regarding a Stinger, or are looking for parts or have parts for sale, please feel free to contact me. Have a Happy Holiday season!

Saving the Stingers

With winter starting, I've heard many stories of people working on their Stingers. It's my intention to document some of these restorations in upcoming issues of the newsletter. But before I begin that series of articles, I thought I would write about Stingers that aren't so fortunate.

The last model year for Stingers was 1989. That would make the youngest Stingers about 22 years old, and the oldest about 29 years old. A lot can happen during that time to a Stinger. Normal wear and tear, weather damage, neglect – all have taken their toll on various Stingers through the years.

In documenting Stingers, I've come across a few that that have had "incidents" and I thought I would share them.

Weather disasters, such as hurricanes, have hit a couple of Stingers on the registry. For an example, take a look at the boat "Half Fast":

This boat was one of the first boats I found that had been damaged by a hurricane – and it's one of the most severely damaged. There's a clear line of mud up to the exhaust pipes and there's a gaping hole in the side of it.

Another boat damaged in a hurricane was "Naughty Times":

The damage to Naughty Times is not as bad as Half Fast, but it was put up for sale as salvaged.

Hurricanes are not the only weather related disasters to befall a Stinger – wind storms as well have sunk them. One of the saddest stories is that of “Nicky Dene”:

Nicky Dene was a 312 located on the east coast. A wind storm sunk it at its dock. The owner raised the boat, and then tried to sell it or give it away. But there were no takers. The saddest fate was in store for Nicky Dene as she was scrapped:

Natural disasters aren't the only ways Stingers end up in the salvage yard. Fatal mechanical problems can sink a Stinger as well – take the story of “Guilty as Sin”:

The owner was running the boat across a lake when a lower unit U joint let go and shredded the bellows seal, sinking the boat.

These are only a few of the Stingers I've found in my research. On the website, I've marked the boats that have been damaged with an icon in the shape of a life preserver for easy identification.

It's my hope that with this website, no more Stingers will fall victim to the scrap yard. By bringing together people who are interested in Stingers, with those that have Stingers that need work, maybe a few can be saved.

Up for sale is a very nice freshwater 40' Stinger. It was a great lakes boat. Has new twin 500 hp mercruiser big blocks, new TRS drives, Borg Warner velvet drive trans, and new hydromotive 4 blade props. All new custom Imron paint, all new upholstery (ready to be installed), the interior needs to be carpeted and the new seats and upholstery installed. The drive trains are ready to go. Other minor things need to be finished before carpet like interior lighting, stereo, and what ever else you would want to install down below. Comes with new trailer. This boat has been in my garage for the last 3 yrs. I have started the engines 3 times a year and let them run for a little while and fogged them. All the hard work is done!-(the exterior and drivetrain). And I have been picking at the interior little by little but my life has changed. Now I have 2 kids and a wife that take up all my time. We have a Formula 272SR1 that we use regularly. I hate to sell this boat but I just can't see my self finishing it. Everything is there to finish it, just needs a couple of months invested which I don't have, it is 90% done. It would make somebody a very nice boat and a nice winter project. I will consider some trades like a cabin class 32' trojan or sea ray 340 or 370 or others , email me for more info or pics
